Program’s Description and Purpose: This is a graduate program designed to prepare educators to integrate sound educational theory, effective teaching practices, scholarly inquiry, and Christian faith in their professional practice. Grounded in a biblical worldview, the program understands education as the development of the whole person—intellectually, professionally, ethically, socially, and spiritually—and emphasizes the pursuit of truth, human dignity, character formation, service, and lifelong learning. Through the study of learning theories, teaching strategies, instructional design, curriculum and assessment, educational technology, research, and Christian ethics, students develop the knowledge, skills, and dispositions necessary to become thoughtful, effective, and Christ-centered educators who contribute meaningfully to the educational communities they serve.
